

Jenny Vaux's Biography

I am passionate about equality and supporting the most vulnerable in our society, believing where we live should be inclusive and supportive of everyone, whatever their circumstances. This includes providing local facilities which enable people to work from home, to be mobile with good public transport and road links, and places to meet and relax close to their homes

I have worked for the NHS for many years in business roles, currently as a director for Berkshire Healthcare NHS Foundation Trust, which provides community physical and mental health services. I have also worked in learning disability services, housing associations and mental health charities. I am currently a non-executive director for Two Saints, a charity supporting people to avoid homelessness or who are homeless.

I moved to Sherfield Park in 2012 with my husband, Steve. We have two adult children, and I have participated in various community group committees, including supporting playgroups and schools. My main hobby is tennis, both playing and as an active committee member at a local tennis club.